

DESIGN & DEVELOPMENT

There is a huge range of professions within the construction industry; much more than what you see on a construction site. There are design, planning, project management, analysis, as well as the practical construction work.

Staffgroup work across the entire construction process, from conception to completion.

When it comes to designing, we are up-to-date with the latest technology developments such as BIM, as well as new environmental legislations needed to be met.

When a development is underway, the project management team needs to be experienced, knowledgeable and have a fine eye for detail to ensure the development lifecycle - from initiation to planning, execution and closure - is delivered on schedule and within budget.

As construction begins, our database of site managers, service engineers, system managers and structural engineers ensure the building is safe, functional and operates efficiently.

We appreciate the range of skills and responsibilities different roles within construction design and development require. Whether you need individuals for planning and overseeing; designing and modifying; developing and maintaining; or problem solving and safety; we can find the right individual to meet your requirements.
